Hair flies, riffs kill.

Can't imagine a better venue to have seen visceral duo. The Chateau may be known for its celeb patrons, but its vintage atmosphere is seductive whoever happens to be hanging. It took on an almost goth feel, its church-like windows and candelabras surrounding the band as they offered their possessed music for attendees that included an odd assortment ranging from Marilyn Manson to Lindsay Lohan (apparently the ban from Chateau has been lifted now that she's clean). In the spirit of The Kills ever-messy tressed, tight, black garb, the crowd was refreshingly casual, with clusters of faded tees, vintage frocks, skinny jeans, shorts with tights (over this one already!), all glammed up by pricey designer bags and shoes. As Dolly Parton once said, "It takes a lot of money to look this cheap."

No surprise, this party gig was as rapid and raw as we hear The Kills' show at The Music Box was. Alison Mosshart has one of the best headbengin' howls in rock and Jamie Hince's guitar work is utterly hypnotic when you can take your eyes away from his bandmate (which is hard to do). The rhythms that drive the band's new release, Blood Pressures, are complex and infectious, but they never out-ravage the duo's contributions on stage or record.

Check out the free remix they released of the track Satellite on SoundCloud here.
